February Edition

3 Ways to Spend Valentine's Day with Your Furry Friend

Your best friend won't know it's Valentine's Day but you can still make them feel extra special! Here's a few dates to try:

TAKE THEM OUT FOR A BITE TO EAT

Choose a pet-friendly restaurant to grab a bite to eat! Our favorite dog-friendly places in Waco are Vitek's, Fuzzy Tacos, and if you're in the mood for coffee, Common Grounds.

HIKE IT UP

Not in the mood? Get away from all the Valentine's Day stuff and go hiking with your best friend at Cameron Park.

RED, WHITE, AND PINK

Valentine's Day doesn't have to be extravagant: it could be as simple as letting your dog pick out their own toy at your local pet store! If you're feeling extra fancy, dress them up in something red, pink, or white!

Be anthropomorphic, but only in moderation!

"Anthropomorphize - verb - attribute human characteristics or behavior to an animal or object."

We dog lovers, myself included, tend to think of our dogs as children. You are, after all, responsible for the physical and emotional well-being of your dog, as well as survival, which places you in a parent-like role. However, when training your dog for wanted behaviors, or when attempting to extinguish unwanted behaviors, it's important to understand and appreciate the differences between a dog's learning process and that of a human. Learning those differences will help you immensely in your approach to training, and improve your relationship with your pup in the long run.
